

History.

Mrs Woodhead- Year 3 and 4 Base leader, Year 4 class teacher and History lead.

This is my twelfth-year teaching at Crossflatts, and I love seeing children's curiosity for History ignited as they discover the people, places and events that have shaped our world.

I am passionate about teaching History because it helps children to develop a deeper understanding of the world around them and how it has been shaped over time. Our History curriculum enables children to explore how Britain has been influenced by events and people from across the world, while also developing an understanding of the rich history of our own local community.

Teaching History encourages children to ask questions, explore evidence, consider different perspectives and understand how and why things have changed over time. I love creating opportunities for children to make connections between the past and the world they live in today, helping them to understand how history continues to shape Britain, both nationally and locally.

Our Vision

At Crossflatts, our aim is for every child to become a curious historian. From Nursery to Year 6, we want each child to develop a love of finding out about the past and to understand how the people, events and ideas of the past have shaped the world we live in today.

We believe that History should inspire children to ask questions, explore, investigate, think critically and help develop their skills to make their own interpretations. Our History curriculum takes children on a journey from their own lives and families, through our local history, the history of Britain and significant events and civilisations from around the world. Children will discover how people lived, how societies have changed and how different cultures and communities have influenced one another. This will enable children to develop respect for the diverse people and cultures within Britain and the wider world.

We want children to recognise that the past is all around them and understand that they too are part of the story of history.
